8/10 Location

The InterContinental is located at the edge of downtown at the foot of the Miami River and Biscayne Bay. Brickell, the city's financial district, is just across the river and both neighbourhoods have more dining and nightlife options than ever before, including upscale restaurants like Zuma, Coya and Quinto La Huella to laidback bars like Pawnbroker and The Corner. The neighbourhood is also home to the landmark Peréz Art Museum Miami, the American Airlines Arena and the Adrienne Arsht Center for the Performing Arts. South Beach, Wynwood and the Design Districts can be accessed in a 20minute drive.

8/10 Style & character

The InterContinental has gone to great lengths to stay modern with a $30 million renovation, updating both the lobby and guest rooms, and adding a digital canvas to the 34-storey façade, which projects the silhouette of a sexy dancer at night. The centrepiece of the sprawling marble lobby is an abstract stone sculpture by Henry Moore with ample seating and an open floor plan leading to the hotel's Toro Toro bar and restaurant. Typically bustling with hotel guests and business people, it has a touch of old-fashioned sophistication without feeling tired.

8/10 Service & facilities

A mature luxury hotel brand; service at the InterContinental is professional, friendly and courteous with an excellent concierge team. Popular for both gala events and business conferences, it has ample meeting and ballroom space. A rooftop pool features an adjacent fitness centre, jogging track and spa.
